Art Department Continues to Grow

2018 marks the sixth year that Kathy Bechtel has been the Art Director at the FLPC. Kathy was asked to "grow" the art workshop program by building on the work of previous directors Sandy Jackoboice, Kasey Cornwall and John Knight, and so it has. Kathy says, "People come from all over the country as well as West Michigan to study with artists of great notoriety." This summer's workshop offerings include "Sparkle-Reading the Light" with W. Truman Hosner and "Zorn Palette Workshop" with Aaron Westerberg.

In addition to the art workshops, the Art Department offers additional opportunities for artists as well.

Located at each campus, the Guardian Galleries display the work of one or two artists every four months. Currently, Kathleen Mooney's abstract paintings are exhibited at the Lowell Campus. At the Grand Rapids Campus, the abstract artwork of Bill Alexander hangs through early summer and will be followed by Carole Nielsen's watercolor and watercolor batiks. The galleries are open to the public during regular business hours.

Every other Monday, the Art Department has a sketch session with a live model.

The Center provides the easels, and the artists bring the medium in which they will work. "It is challenging and fun, and the Center is the perfect spot to let creativity flow," states Barb Schilling, sketch session participant.

Kathleen Mooney teaches a one day acrylic workshop almost every month on different aspects of acrylic painting and the fundamentals of art. The workshops offer an affordable way to explore this medium.

The Franciscan Artists meet every Wednesday at the Lowell Campus in an open studio format. Melissa Lojik, a local artist who regularly attends explains, "Meeting with this wonderful group of artists weekly is stimulating and enjoyable for me." This July the Franciscan Artists will exhibit their artworks in the Terryberry Gallery at St. Cecilia Music Center in Grand Rapids. The public is invited to see their interpretations of abstract work, collages, mixed media pieces and realistic representations.

Finally, based on the success of January's bus trip to the Monet exhibit at the Detroit Institute of Art, artists and friends of the Center have planned a July 25 bus trip to the Chicago Institute of Art to view the John Singer Sargent exhibit. Sargent is one of America's most renowned portrait painters. One bus is filled and people are signing up for the second.

Kathy is always looking for ways to expand the art department and its programs. She says, "I have met the most wonderful people who search for creativity to enrich their lives. I'd like to continue to expand our art workshops so that even more people throughout the US will be aware of this hidden gem found in Lowell, MI."

Music Therapists Create Heartbeat Recordings

The Franciscan Life Process Center partners with Spectrum Health Hospice to provide music therapy for its patients. Recently Spectrum Hospice, using money from its donors, purchased equipment to create heartbeat recordings. Amanda Partlo, MT-BC explains, "We take an audio recording of a patient's heartbeat, the most intimate sound of the human body, and put music to it, typically, a familiar song that is important to the patient and the family." April Fausch Cullum, MA, MT-BC, continues, "These recordings help families stay deeply connected with their loved ones."

Volunteers Assist Music Therapy Program

When Pat Menkveld retired in 2014 from Grand Rapids Public Schools, where she worked as an RN, she looked for some way to give back, as well as to stay connected with the staff and students that she had served for so many years. In her work at Pine Grove Learning Center, a school for children with special needs, she had observed Lindsey Perrault, MT-BC, music therapist from the Franciscan Life Process Center as she provided music therapy sessions. Pat decided her new "work" would be helping Lindsey.

Pat began her role as a volunteer in the weekly music therapy session, assisting Lindsey in whatever way was needed. Her enthusiasm was contagious, and soon her husband, Paul, became interested in using his woodworking talents to build adaptive equipment for the children, such as adaptive guitar picks, tambourines and balance boards. For the past year, he has been working on building a squeeze machine, a device that research has shown to help calm anxiety, refocus attention and offer proprioceptive sensory input for children with special needs. He donated it to the Franciscan Life Process Center's music therapy program. We extend our deepest gratitude and appreciation to Pat and Paul for all their generous contribution of time and talent these past four years.

If you would like to volunteer at the Center, please email Sister Colleen Ann Nagle scanagle@lifeprocesscenter.org or call 616-897-7842.

Breathers' Club and Center Collaborate

After Lindsey Perrault, MT-BC, gave a presentation to the Council on Aging on the benefits of music therapy with the elder population, she was contacted by Diane Kirby, founder of the Better Breathers Group in Zeeland. Diane asked if someone from the Franciscan Life Process Center could give a presentation for people struggling with COPD (Chronic Obstructive Pulmonary Disease). Lindsey did this, explaining to the Group that music can promote relaxation to reduce anxiety. She also taught them some daily breathing exercises. Lindsey has subsequently presented to the Grand Rapids Breathers' Club.

If you know of a group who might benefit from a presentation by our music therapy staff, please contact Sister Mary Margaret Delaski, FSE at smmdelaski@lifeprocesscenter.org or call 616-897-7842.

On the Land

The Sisters and Center staff know spring is coming when the sandhill cranes return, the Arnold Promise witch hazel blossoms and seeds are starting to grow in the greenhouse.

With the introduction of bluebird houses on the land, we have increased the presence of bluebirds and tree swallows.

The Laudato Si' Sanctuary continues to expand through the work of the Center staff and volunteers. Varieties of wetland plants including ironweed, Canada rye, and cow parsnip, were planted last fall. Visitors are encouraged to visit the Sanctuary any time but especially in August when the largest bloom of flowers occurs.

Basswood and black walnut trees in the northwest corner of Center land were logged recently. Harvesting wood allows for the new growth of young trees, addresses safety concerns, and generates income for the Center.

Work on the chicken coop continues with the addition of a fence and roosts. Chicks will arrive in May. Students from local Catholic schools attending the Environmental Learning Program will feed the chickens and collect the eggs when classes resume in the fall.

Interested in volunteering on the land? Join us for Community Workdays held on the second Saturday of the month, March through November, 9:30 - noon at the Lowell Campus. Activities take place in the morning followed by a communal lunch. Individuals, families, church and business groups are welcome. Registration is not required.
